Future proofing service providers to the mining industry

Breaking news reveals robots will take 6.5 million jobs by 2030!

For mining, the statistic is predicted to be 100,000 jobs. So, right now, according to McKinsey, the stakes are high for mining and metal companies. Those that harness the full potential of a digital transformation can increase their EBITDA margins by up to 6-8 percentage points.

But what does this mean for most of the Western Australia business community that supports the mining companies? How can they future proof their businesses from robots?

ASCI, in partnership with Robert Walters, proudly presents an event for the mining industry in Perth. If you are a service provider to the mining industry then this event is a must attend for you. Join us for an exclusive discussion from mining companies to share where they think their suppliers should start, especially to better serve them and their own businesses.
